

Weekend Notes

The weather was clear on Saturday so we walked along the river and stopped for coffee near the old bridge before the rain started in the afternoon.

On Sunday we tidied the garden, read for a while and then cooked a simple dinner with the vegetables that were still fresh from last week.

Nothing else of note happened, and it was a quiet and pleasant couple of days overall with little to report beyond the usual small things.